

UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN-MADISON PREVENTION RESEARCH CENTER (UWPRC)

School of Medicine and Public Health | Institute for Research on Poverty | School of Human Ecology | School of Nursing

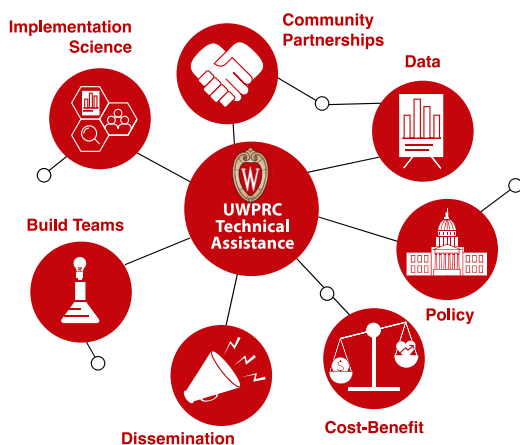

The mission of the UWPRC is to improve the health of low-income women, infants and families through the conduct of high-quality applied health promotion and disease prevention research with a focus on achieving health equity

UWPRC

The UWPRC is a university center that engages academic and community partners in expanding prevention research and its translation and dissemination to improve the health of low-income women, infants, and families. The center supports research, community engagement, and training activities.

Research Support

The UWPRC provides a variety of technical assistance to prevention researchers on campus, as displayed in the figure below.

Core Research Project

Addressing Postpartum Depression in WI Home Visiting Programs

The UWPRC core research project uses a randomized implementation/effectiveness trial of a two-generation, preventive intervention, at multiple sites in Wisconsin to:

- Ameliorate mother's depressive symptoms
- Address relational trauma history
- Support the mother-infant relationship
- Support infant psychosocial and developmental outcomes
- Support family functioning

Community Partnerships

Collaboration with community partners is a central component of the UWPRC. There are multiple ways that community members are engaged in the center's work, which are described below.

Community Advisory Board (CAB)

The CAB advises on research and translation activities. The CAB includes two sub-groups: Organizational Partners and a Family Circle.

Current Organizational Partners

Translational Partners Panel (TPP)

The TPP provides advice on ways to translate research into practice. The TPP currently includes representation from the following types of organizations:

- State and local health departments
- Multi-sector partners
- Non-profit organizations
- Other WI government and officials

CDC Prevention Research Center Network

The UWPRC is a member of the Prevention Research Centers (PRC) Program. It is supported by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention cooperative agreement number 1U48DP006383-01.
